Every once in a while a new company comes along that makes waves in the outdoor industry. One such company is 66° North from Iceland. Already big in Europe, 66° North is now gaining converts stateside. Combining the latest in softshell technology with Euro styling, the Eldgja Jacket is warm, versatile and smart looking. On early morning mountain bike rides in wet, cold conditions, I was impressed by its wind-cutting abilities and the breathable Polartec Power Shield fabric. In many U.S. brands, sizes run small and styles are cut tighter. The Eldgja jacket is very stretchy and allows for unrestricted movement. — MV

GIRLS4SPORT NEOPRENE JACKET
$125, www.girls4sport.com

Designed with ripping water girls in mind, Santa Cruz-based Girls4Sport has created a uniquely comfortable and stylish neoprene jacket — yes, neoprene! This jacket has technical specs that make it equally appropriate for cruising in a kayak or manning the deck on a small sloop. Its close-to-the-body cut, however, makes it a head-turner strolling into the taqueria for a beer and burrito after a great surf session. — CF

LIQUID MOUNTAIN

LIQUID MOUNTAIN XCURSION SX JACKET
$279, www.liquidmountain.com

Low-key styling of your favorite hoodie, but constructed of wind- and water-resistant fabrics, this breathable softshell is a cozy barrier for chilly pursuits.
